

Banking with Amphora

AMPHORA BANK AND TRUST Corporation and Amphora Life Insurance Company Limited were launched recently at a cocktail party at their headquarters in CGI Towers, Warrens.

Deputy Prime Minister Mia Mottley, who is also Minister of Economic Affairs and Development, welcomed the two institutions while outlining the importance of the international business sector to the island's economy.

In his welcome speech, Amphora's president and chief executive, Wayne Fields, said the bank will offer a platform for financial and investment activities and for trust administration for the family in the first instance. It would also offer these services to third-party clients.

The life insurance company would offer insurance products to high-net-worth individuals in the international market. Their initial business markets are Canada, Venezuela, Mexico and the United States. (KB)

CHAIRMAN of the Amphora Bank & Trust Corporation and Life Insurance Company, Louis Masalcotte (left), sharing a friendly moment with Minister of Economic Affairs and Development, Mia Mottley (second left), and chief executive officer of Trident Insurance, Algermon Leacock, and his wife Shella. (Picture by Anzola Hill Ltd)

CHAIRMAN Louis Masalcotte (right), sharing a light moment with Senator Philip Goddard (centre) and Jean-Pierre Menard, vice-president of Royal Bank of Canada Dominion Securities.

PHILIP ATKINSON, partner of PricewaterhouseCoopers (right), and Josée Campagnat, president of Genip Investments Inc., listening to attorney, Dr. Trevor Carmichael (left).

DIRECTOR of Amphora Bank & Trust Corporation and Life Insurance Company, Paul Altman (centre), along with Wayne Fields, president and CEO (right), speaking with Janice Hepher.

DR MARION WILLIAMS, (right), governor of the Central Bank, enjoying conversation with Chairman Masalcotte (left) and president/CEO Wayne Fields.